Preparation: A teacher or classroom aide should administer the survey to groups of about 3-5 students at a time. Each child should have a copy of the survey and a light shade (yellow, light blue, pink, etc.) of marker or crayon to color in the face that best reflects the way he or she feels about each statement. A sheet of construction paper could be used to cover the statements on each student's survey that have not been asked. The teacher can move the construction paper down the page to reveal the next statement and set of faces. The teacher or aide should read all directions and then read each statement aloud. Each student in the group should try to select a response before the teacher moves the paper and reads the next statement. Please encourage children to do their own work.

Directions to be read aloud: I would like to know what you think about some of the things you do in school. I will read some sentences to you. You will be asked to color the face for your answer of YES or NO. Other children can have a different answer than yours. Do the best you can. There are no right or wrong answers. Listen to all of the directions then color the face to show your answer. You can color the entire box if you like.

For example, the first sentence is, "I like ice cream."

	NO	YES
I like ice cream.

Listen carefully to what you should do next.

If you don't like ice cream, you should color the face that has a frown. This means, "No."

But if you do like ice cream, you should color the face with the smiling mouth. This means, "Yes."

1) Listen to the next sentence, "I share my things with others."

If you don't share your things with others, this means, "No." Color the frowning face.

If you do share your things with others, such as your toys, this means, "Yes." Color the smiling face.

Remember, color in the face that is most like what you do right now.

2) Listen to the next sentence, "When I am angry with someone, I know how to calm down."

If you do not know how to calm down or cannot easily calm down when you are angry or upset, this means, "No." Color the frowning face.

If you know how to calm down when you are angry or upset with someone, this means, "Yes." Color the smiling face.

3) Listen to the next sentence, "I try to tell the truth even when it is hard to do."

If you do not think that you tell the truth as often as possible, this means, "No." Color the frowning face.

If you think you tell the truth as often as possible, this means, "Yes." Color the smiling face.

4) Listen to the next sentence, "I thank people when they help me."

If you do not thank people or forget to thank people when they help you out, this means, "No." Color the frowning face.

If you thank people when they help you out, this means, "Yes." Color the smiling face.

5) Listen to the next sentence, "I try to help when someone is sad."

If you do not try to help people who are sad, this means, "No." Color the frowning face.

If you try to help friends or family when they are sad, this means, "Yes." Color the smiling face.
